

Rip'd Jeans

Alexander S. Peak

23 November 2005

What is up with all the rip'd Jeans I'm seeing around Campus? Is this back in Style?

I simply don't think this is fair to Me.* For the past nine Years now, I've been wanting rip'd Jeans. The catch is, I've wanted Them to rip naturally, of their own accord. Of course, I've done plenty of growing over this Time, and have grown out of plenty of Jeans. Why is it not fair? Because my Jeans are too durable. They don't rip. And I rarely trip.

There's another Problem with this new Trend. Seeing rip'd Jeans on a Girl used to be a Sign. It used to signify that She was exceptionally cool. Clearly, Girls have always looked hotter in rip'd, grungy Jeans than in the stylish Jeans most of Them have been wearing over these past nine Years. But now that so many are wearing rip'd Jeans, it's fucking with my Coolness-o-Meter. How am I to tell which Girls are wearing these rip'd Jeans because said Jeans are intrinsically cool, and which are just wearing them for the Popularity?

Well, now that I'm not growing, or at least not at a perceivable Rate, perhaps I can hold on to these lovely "Loose Straight Fit" cut Levi Jeans long enough to get some Holes in Them. Let's cross our dirty little Fingers and hope.

* I must note now, before it be late, that this piece is not to be taken too seriously.